

How will the new administration tackle HK's housing crisis?

The new administration has pledged to “spare no effort” to alleviate the notorious housing shortage in Hong Kong. As the community has long expected the government to roll out drastic measures to solve this problem, will we see a significant shift in the government’s land and housing policies?

Ryan Ip, Head of Land and Housing Research at Our Hong Kong Foundation, will delve into the upcoming supply of land and housing. Through an in-depth analysis of the future land and housing supply initiatives, Ryan will provide clues on what to expect from the possible policy directions of the new administration.

Ryan is the Head of Land and Housing Research at Our Hong Kong Foundation. He manages a team of cross-field professionals to conduct in-depth research and advise the Hong Kong Government on area of land supply, urban planning, and housing policy. He was invited as speakers at various investor forums and professional seminars, and an active commentator of the subject on newspaper, radio, and television.

He is also a member of the Hong Kong Government's Land and Development Advisory Committee, the Executive Committee of the China Real Estate Chamber of Commerce Hong Kong and International Chapter, and the International Advisory Committee of the Research Institute for Land and Space at the Hong Kong Polytechnic University. Before joining OHKF, he was an economist at Jones Lang LaSalle and the Hong Kong Monetary Authority. He holds a Master of Science degree in Economics at the London School of Economics.